Teaching in Kenya

By Dr. Elizabeth Sharp,
Assistant Professor of Kinesiology

Elizabeth Sharp traveled to the slum of Mathare, just outside of Nairobi, Kenya for 2 weeks this summer. She lived in the slum and spent her days visiting schools and working with teachers. Though she found many differences in education, she also found the commonality of wanting the best for students. Most school teachers have had no teacher training and many have not graduated High School. At the end of the trip, Elizabeth conducted an all-day workshop on "Becoming an Effective Teacher" for 40 local teachers. Come join Elizabeth as she talks about this eye-opening experience.

Please come with your lunch and bring your colleagues.

(Students are welcome to join in too!)
