

HLC: 3 Days and Counting...Did You Know?
November 15, 2013

Did you know what happens after the site visit by the Higher Learning Commission Evaluation Team?

Following the campus visit, the review process continues for several months. The review team will continue its work to draft its report, synthesize its observations, and consult with Commission staff as needed. Once the team report is finalized, the Commission will send the report to CMU for an opportunity to provide an institutional response that may contest facts. A second, desk-review by peers follows, designed to ensure thoroughness, fairness, and due process, and this level of review can include amendments or changes to the team's recommendations. Final Commission action occurs only after the entire review process concludes, and the Commission issues the University's official action letter.
