Who We Are:

This exhibition features six Colorado Mesa University studio art seniors whose work moves between nature, memory, and meaning. Across metal, print, oil paint, and tattooing, they ask what endures and what changes through material inquiry and cultural context.

Alyssa Graziosa casts organic forms in metal, exploring ecosystems' resilience and permanence.

Farron Khan's oil paintings use fragmentation and symbolism to examine how labor, place, memory, and belief shape life.

Madison Harvey depicts symbolic plants and animals through tattooing, printmaking, and casting, reflecting Creation.

Rebecca McGaffick uses printmaking to capture change in the natural world through subtle patterns.

Shane Kobald's outdoor-inspired art celebrates nature's bond with storytelling, inviting appreciation.

Susannah Wood explores links between the physical world and unconscious mind via symbolism, influenced by her chronic pain.
