

Todd Doherty

Western Water Partnerships

Todd Doherty is the president and founder of Western Water Partnerships (WWP), a Colorado Public Benefit Corporation with the mission of preserving irrigated agricultural lands by facilitating water sharing agreements between farmers, ranchers, municipal water providers, open space departments and local governments. Mr. Doherty has over 20 years of experience in western water management and policy at the state and local level. Using market-based approaches, WWP provides a vehicle for entities to help create a West where cities and farms/ranches coexist while supporting local agricultural production and sustainable communities.
