University of South Dakota

Paul Formisano is Associate Professor and Director of Writing at the University of South Dakota. His teaching and research in the environmental humanities brings together literary and rhetorical studies to address the American West's complex, interdisciplinary natural resource issues. His forthcoming book, Tributary Voices: Literary and Rhetorical Explorations of the Colorado River, will appear in April 2022 by the University of Nevada Press. This study considers historically overlooked perspectives about the river and their use of narrative to reimagine our relationship to the Colorado and promote more sustainable relationships to this threatened resource. Dr. Formisano's research has appeared in various journals including The Journal of Ecocriticism, Landscapes: The Journal of the International Centre for Landscape and Language, Review of International American Studies, and Western American Literature, as well as edited collections about western America's literary culture. He is currently working on an anthology about the literature of dams.
